Purpose of the course unit: programme competences to be developed

The course aims at examining various scientific approaches to the analysis of metaphor. Students will familiarize themselves with different ways of studying the metaphor: the traditional approach, based on the Classical tradition, the use of metaphor in rhetoric as well as the concept of the cognitive metaphor. Different approaches to metaphor in various fields of knowledge (semiotics, fine arts, cognitive sciences) will be studied and tried out.

Learning outcomes of the course unit	Teaching and learning methods	Assessment methods
Ability to carry out a coherent argument in oral and written form.  Ability to think analytically and critically, taking into consideration that the main topic of discussion is the connection of cognitive abilities with metaphoric thinking	The analysis of the formation of various approaches to metaphors in an interactive class format.  Students and the professor will analyze and interpret some samples of sample texts (close reading) and analyze different linguistic situations	There will be an analytical paper assigned in the middle of the term—students will be required to meet with the professor to discuss the theme of their paper and their plans for approaching the analysis of the specific material they choose to study (in English or Lithuanian).  At the end of the term there will be a final exam in the format of a set of open questions marked for content (in English or Lithuanian).
